

Endangered 'Paradise' in the Himalayas

This former Buddhist kingdom is located in the Northwest of Nepal, embedded in the Himalayan mountain range. The unreal countryside made up of canyons and deserts is dotted with oasis, monasteries and unspoiled villages. We were delighted to participate a little in the lives of the inhabitants during our 3 weeks of trekking.

We got to know them during their celebrations, prayers and daily working lives.

They are the last representatives of the pure, Tibetan culture, a long way away from the Chinese influence. This intact world is however endangered by the progressive modernization.

Our multi-media show takes you through this unique country. The pictures and the music will give you an impression of the barren countryside, of the thousand-year-old culture and religion as well as the simple daily life of the people.

*Multivision Show in two parts
545 Digital photos taken with Nikon cameras and lenses*

*Projection with HD beamer
Duration: 50 minutes*