

For ten weeks and 9'000 km on the road Annemarie Koelliker and Roberto Saibene followed the traces of the earlier pioneers. They were not looking for gold but wanted to immerse themselves in the solitude and silence of the endless wilderness in the Far North. Being completely fascinated by this majestic nature they adopted the simple campers' life as their temporary lifestyle. Pictures of spectacular landscapes and videos of emotional encounters with wildlife convert this Multivision show into a firework of impressions. The reportage also looks back at the history of the former immigrants and adventurers as well as at their legendary actions. Furthermore, the contact with the native inhabitants - the First Nation People -, their culture and everyday life deeply impressed them.
