

Far North

The Call of Solitude

In recent years, Annemarie Koelliker and Roberto Saibene have traveled to the loneliest regions on earth. In the Far North they found what they miss in our crowded, hectic world: space, silence, freedom and untouched nature. They traveled to three regions in different seasons in different ways: in a four-wheel camper, on board an expedition ship and with skis and snowshoes. The unique photos and videos offer fantastically beautiful landscapes such as tundra, dense forests, a rich floral display, countless lakes and glaciers. This wilderness is also home to mighty grizzly and polar bears, as well as cute arctic ground squirrels. The encounter with the locals, the Inuit, and their millennia-old culture was one of the highlights of these trips.
